PR/Communications Internship at CARE

WHAT: CARE, one of the world’s largest humanitarian organizations, is looking for a PR/communications intern to work on site at least 15 hours a week.

WHAT WILL YOU DO: Specific tasks include media monitoring and media list development (using a web-based system for both) as well as the opportunity for media outreach around CARE’s campaigns and events. You’ll produce a monthly report of media hits and score those hits for message accuracy and other key metrics.

EXTRA PERKS: You will work with a small-but-mighty communications team led by recovering reporters. You’ll do your part in literally changing the world: Last year, CARE worked in more than 94 countries reached more than 80 million people around the world with poverty-fighting programs. We’re located downtown (151 Ellis St.) and offer free parking.

WHO I REALLY WANT: Current students that have a natural interest in media and communications. Do you have more than two news apps on your phone? Can you name at least three news (local and national) anchors? Apply.

DOES IT PAY? Yes ($10 an hour) AND my interns have gone on to jobs at PR agencies (both global and local) as well as entry-level marketing positions.

WHEN: Immediately. End date is negotiable but if it’s working for us both, you can stay for up to a year.

INTERESTED? Two steps. 1. Learn more about CARE at care.org. 2. Email your resume and brief cover letter to nharris@care.org.
